Webinar	Description	Price
Accepting children for who they are	Often we feel pressure to make children into a societal expectation of what they should be instead of allowing children to be who they are and celebrating this. This webinar explores how to achieve this.	$38.50
Adding specific learning to your loose parts	While loose parts are amazing open-ended play opportunities, this webinar will explore different items you can add to support specific goals and outcomes.	$38.50
Adding structure to open-ended play	While open-ended play allows for meaningful and child-focused learning opportunities, some children prefer structure to help them engage. This webinar explores how to support this with resources and tools.	$38.50
Adopting a Risk/Benefit Approach	Just because another service does something doesn't always mean it will be right for you. This webinar explores how to weigh up the risks against the benefits to help make a decision within your service that is going to be right for you in your context.	$38.50
Advocating for Play	One of the ECA code of ethics points talks about the importance of advocating for play and this webinar will provide some meaningful ways to achieve this.	$38.50
Advocating on the children's behalf*	Sometimes when making decisions in the service we base them on the needs of the adults, however it is important that educators speak up on behalf of the children and their needs to make sure they are considered.	$38.50
Agency with Infants	Explore what agency can look like with infants and how to make sure children have agency within your service by including their needs in decisions.	$38.50
Agency with Preschoolers	Explore what agency can look like with preschoolers and how to make sure children have agency within your service by including their needs in decisions.	$38.50
Agency with School Aged Children	Explore what agency can look like with school aged children and how to make sure children have agency within your service by including their needs in decisions.	$38.50
